Library Awarded Technology Grant

The Henderson County Library System will soon be installing Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) technology at the Main and Fletcher Libraries thanks to a Library Services Technology Act (LSTA) grant for $97,388 and matching funds of $26,840 from the Friends of the Library.

RFID is a low-level radio frequency tag that is detected by a special reader which has the capability of scanning several items at once. Over a period of several months staff will insert RFID tags into every item owned by those two libraries. Through this technology both library users and staff will experience improved efficiencies while visiting the library.

A few of the efficiencies this technology will offer are:

- Checkout of multiple items in a single motion
- Reduced checkout wait times with a minimal rate of error
- Inventory tracking resulting in a more accurate catalog
- Reduction in repetitive tasks, freeing staff to focus attention on more complex user needs

While this grant covers installation at the Main and Fletcher Libraries this fiscal year, plans are already underway to apply for a second grant to complete installation at the remaining libraries next fiscal year.

- Trina Rushing, Library Director

This grant, awarded by the State Library of North Carolina, is made possible through funding from the federal Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) under the provisions of the Library Services and Technology Act as administered by the State Library of North Carolina, a division of the Department of Natural and Cultural Resources.

LIGHT ON FRIENDS OF THE LIBRARY

FALL BOOK SALE!

Here comes the BIG ONE! During September, your Friends of the Library will conduct one of the largest book/CD/DVD sales in the southeast with thousands of donated items offered at outstanding prices.

Ten thousand hours of volunteer time make this sale special. All books are checked for condition, sorted, and placed on the shelves by category. See <https://www.friendsofthehcpl.org/book-sales> for details.

Our sales in the spring and fall provide almost $100,000 for the library. These funds support the programming and collection needs of a modern library. With the work of our Friends volunteers and with your support of our sales, your library will continue to serve and excite all who visit it.

See you at the sale!

New video and website highlight the contributions of the Friends of the Library

For more than a century, the Friends of the Henderson County Public Library have supported the work of the library in our community.

Now a new video sheds light on the many ways the Friends enhance the programs and services that the library offers.

Richard Labunski, a Flat Rock resident and retired journalism professor, produced the nine-minute video as a gift to the Friends. The video explains that many of the programs and materials that the Friends offer would not otherwise be available to the library's patrons and the public.

The Friends believe they have an important role to play in improving the lives of county residents. "Our volunteers know that a community is better off when people are literate – in the broad sense of that term– which includes not only reading but also computer literacy and other skills that improve the lives of those who live in Henderson County," said Bill Ramsey, President of the Friends. And he added, "We are hoping the new video and website will encourage people to join the Friends and volunteer."

You can see the video and learn more about the Friends at their website:

REGIONAL ROUNDUP

Here's what's new from local authors or books about our area. A couple of excellent North Carolina titles are Lynne Hinton's book The View From Here, about a woman who climbs into a tree to do some reflection on her life and stays there, and Delia Owens' Where the Crawdad Sings takes place in the coastal marshes with a young girl coming to terms with her solitude. Both books are great picks for anyone who likes Barbara Kingsolver or Karen Russell.

In regional mysteries, Frederick Ramsay's Jesse Sutherlin series comes to its conclusion with Countdown, about a war hero investigating a rivalry between two mountain clans of Virginia, completed after the author's passing with the help of the talented Dana Stabenow. Julie Keller's West Virginia prosecutor Bell Elkins gets a 7th novel in Bone on Bone, which looks at drug abuse in a mountain community. In a new series, J. G. Hetherington introduces a Hillsborough journalist solving cold cases in Last Girl Gone. For something cozier, try the Lighthouse Library Mystery called The Spook in the Stacks, or in the Blue Ridge Mystery series, the new one is Shelved Under Murder.

Christian Fiction readers may enjoy Send Down the Rain, by Charles Martin (author of the recent book-to-film story The Mountain Between Us), which begins with a Vietnam veteran finding a woman and her two children in the Western North Carolina forest. For something with suspense, try a nail biter set in Alabama, Hurricane Season by Lauren Denton, and in historical romance, the books Sons of Blackbird Mountain by Joanne Bischof has an immigrant story of the 1800s.

In literary thrillers, a man fleeing his past takes refuge in a Virginia nature preserve in Bearskin by James A. McLaughlin, natural disasters set a family in motion in The Road to Bittersweet by Donna Everhart, and Let's No One Get Hurt by Jon Pineda is about a family of squatters making do. Regional novelist David Joy has a new book about a hunting accident called The Line That Held Us, and his literary predecessor William Gay has a posthumous book out called The Lost Country, which takes place like all his novels in the invented community of Ackerman's Field, Tennessee.

For nonfiction, there is a sobering book about the opioid epidemic in Appalachia called Dopesick from Beth Macy, author of Truevine.

Two new regional cookbooks are worth checking out, Southern From Scratch by Ashley English and A Baker's Year by Tara Jensen, while Soul by Todd Richards is an excellent addition to books on Southern cooking.

Thanks for reading!

This August, the library celebrated 24 super readers who achieved the goal of reading at least 1000 books before entering Kindergarten.

Readers and their families completed logs as they read books together and turned them in for prizes along the way. All the children received a bag full of goodies, got their faces painted, and enjoyed some yummy cake.

The Main Library had a splash of color and a little inspiration added to its exterior this summer.

Library staff picked some of their favorite quotes about libraries and reading to adorn the pillars near the entryway.

On Washington Street, the windows reflect the beauty of our mountain community and encourage passersby to learn, read, play, join, connect, and explore no matter their age.
