Hendersonville, NC – January 18, 2024

Henderson County Assistant Manager Amy Brantley was honored at the January 17th Board of Commissioners meeting as the recipient of the A. John “Jack” Vogt Lifetime Achievement Award for Outstanding Commitment to the Advancement of Local Government Budgeting & Evaluation. To date, 18 other distinguished local government employees have received this award from the North Carolina Local Government Budget Association.

Nominees of this award are nominated by their peers and must have the following qualifications: at least 10 years of local government experience in North Carolina; commitment to the field of local government budgeting and evaluation; commitment to professional development and ongoing learning; innovation in budgeting and evaluation; commitment to nurturing, mentoring, or educating others in the field. Amy Brantley has spent her 32-year career in public service, focused on local government budget. Prior to the creation of budgeting software used by many professionals today, Amy created a process and used resources that were shared and replicated by other jurisdictions in North Carolina.

“Ms. Brantley has been a faithful steward of taxpayers’ resources for her entire career,” states County Manager John Mitchell. “I join with the rest of the County staff and her peers in professional local government in recognizing her for her contribution to good government and sound budgeting.”
